Another feature of the opening will be the May Day festival in which all children of the public schools will vie for valuable prizes and three silver loving cups. The climax of the festival will be a Maypole dance on the beach, which will be followed by a beach frolic replete with games and varied entertaining events.

Music for the Inaugural ball tonight will be provided by Owen Fallon and his Californians, superb dance band, which has found strong favor with local dance fans since its opening at Mission Beach last Tuesday. Two spectacular displays of aerial fireworks at 8:30 tonight and tomorrow night, will complete what promises to be one of the best two-day celebrations ever held at Mission Beach.

FREE LECTURE ON

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Christian Science society, Ocean Beach, Calif., announces a free lecture on Christian Science by Miss Margaret Murney Glenn, C. S. B., of Boston, Mass., a member of the Board of Lectureship of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., at the Strand theater, Newport avenue, Ocean Beach, Sunday afternoon, May 1, 1927, at 3 o'clock.

STRAND THEATRE

Saturday: Priscilla Dean in "West of Broadway." A thrilling romantic comedy of cowboys and golf balls, six-shooters and golf clubs, cattle rustlers and petticoats, all the elements of rich entertainment are contained in this western picture. It gets away from the old style shoot 'em up and drag 'em out Western. It is the kind of picture the whole family will enjoy. "Drops from Heaven" will be the scenic. A news weekly and Max Sennett comedy.

Sunday and Monday: Gilda Gray, Tom Moore and Chester Conklin in "Cabaret." It's quite a jump from the South Seas to Broadway, Gilda Gray has negotiated it easily. Emerging from a romantic background of sunlight and moonlight and sheltering palms to take in the atmosphere of a night club the star has occasion to be emotional in as crisp a melodrama that has played the Strand in some time. Gilda Gray shows some of the best dancing she has ever done in this picture, and the whole cast is good. A comedy and fables complete the program.

Tuesday and Wednesday: Milton Sills in "The Silent Lover" with Charlie Murray, Viola Dana, Montagu Love, Edmund Carew, Natalie Kingston and an all star cast. "The Silent Lover," a merchant of women, he had paid for three, paid in disgrace and exile, in blood and blows, and now in gold. Which should he take? The one he loved most. The one who loved him most, or the one he could not forget. In this picture Milton Sills makes the best shiek on the screen today. A comedy and the news weekly on the same bill.

Thursday and Friday: Goethe's immortal masterpiece, "Faust," the story of a struggle between good and evil. Never before has the screen revealed a spectacle of such a size and impressiveness as in this epic production. The world-famous story of love and temptation, Emil Jannings, hailed as one of the greatest of screen players gives a most astonishing performance of Mephistopheles. Lloyd Hamilton in "Jolly Tars" is a comedy that is bound to make you laugh. The seventh chapter of "The Silent Flyer" completes one of the best programs.

Students of Theosophical University in the final tableau of the ancient Greek Mystery Drama, "The Eumenides" of Aeschylus, as presented under the personal direction of Katherine Tingley in the open-air Greek Theater, International Theosophical Headquarters, Point Loma, California, Thursday evening, April 21, 1927.

THE GRANDEUR OF ANCIENT GREECE

Fine Production of "The Eumenides", Great Mystery-Drama of Aeschylus

At Greek Theater, Point Loma

By Sir Herbert von Krumhaar

The presentation of "The Eumenides," Aeschylus' great mystery-drama, Thursday evening, April 21st, by Katherine Tingley and her group of actor-students at the Greek Theater, Point Loma, was a dramatic event of wondrous beauty. It was a rare achievement as a production, staged with full modern equipment, with consummate artistry, splendid diction, in a setting of natural enchantment that immediately captivated the imagination of the audience preparing the mind for the unfolding of its deeper reality. But it was not the beauty of its external garb alone, for the indwelling power and inspiration of its symbolism as a sublime allegory of the soul were expressed in a masterly way.

This symbolism which runs through the whole drama, is vividly realized in the opening scene. Here we see Orestes the central figure of the play as a suppliant at the shrine of Apollo at Delphi, whither he has been pursued by the vengeful Furies, who have tracked him right into the precincts of the Temple, but lurk in the shadows, asleep, overpowered by its atmosphere of Light. Beside the suppliant Orestes stands the shining figure of Apollo who promises him divine protection and bids him seek the Temple of Athena at Athens for final purification. Here we have a picture of the higher and lower elements of man—Apollo and the Furies as the two extremes of the powers of light and darkness, and Orestes, who stands for humanity, whose heart is the battleground of these contending forces of Good and Evil. It is noteworthy, also, that the aspiration of Orestes to resort to the bright goddess Athena, the light of Divine Wisdom, awakens the direful ghost of the guilty Clytemnestra, who in turn arouses the torpid Furies to their relentless, blood-thirsty pursuit. In this may be seen figured the reaction of man's lower nature which inevitably follows all heroic aspiration.

Very impressive in its stately grace was the entrance of Athena and her escort, a scene of bright presences arrayed within the gleaming white columns of the Temple. And again, almost poignant in its levelness and radiant energy was the rhythmic grace of the Greek dances, when the Furies, prevailed upon by the magical wisdom of Athena to cast off their heritage of vengeance, "spring into light," transformed into lovers of truth and justice—the gracious Eumenides, "Bestowers of Blessing".

It is in scenes like these, in all their luxurious bloom of life and color, enjoyed amidst the enfolding presence of nature, that one feels the full charm of this delectable place, in which nature's voices—the whispering groves, the distant surge of ocean, and overhead, the silence of starlit sky, all join in an accompaniment of natural pervading harmony, adding its undertone to a picture which comprehends in scope the whole of nature, human and divine.

Much might be said of the excellent acting, the admirably rendered lines,—of Orestes, of Apollo, of Athena, of the splendidly sustained unity of the Chorus of Furies—symbolic of the remorseless stings of conscience,—of the imposingly beautiful procession of crimson-robed torch-bearers—of the original and appropriate music from a hidden orchestra, and not least, the exquisite and original costumes, rich in harmonious coloring and classic grace of form.

The atmosphere of realism was enhanced by the broadly-skillful management of the lighting—suggesting the phases of day or night appropriate to the scenes, and varied with exquisitely delicate coloring—all of which, as every other detail of this wonderful presentation, being charged with significance.

The grand finale in which the assembled array of the whole cast is grouped in song in front of the white columned temple, is a spectacle of thrilling beauty—a harmony of light and color. In this glowing assemblage of beings one sees the visualized hierarchy of the divine, the human, and the elemental, typifying the ancient principles of Justice and Law—guardians and ministrants of the Good, Beautiful and True,—of the moral virtues which uphold the State and link nation with nation in bonds of Eternal Peace.

"Herbert's Antique"
a Paradise

By RUBY DOUGLAS

(Copyright.)

"WHATEVER is the man trying to do with the house?" was the question a neighbor asked.

"Tear it—looks to me," replied her companion across the fence.

They were both watching the, to them, ridiculous proceedings of the young man who, apparently, had bought the little house on the corner. The new owner was making what his feminine neighbors considered a total wreck of the place. He had scraped and whittled down the perfectly good shingles until they looked like nothing so much as some handmade things used because there was nothing else. He had lopped off a nice even corner to make it look as if it had sagged on its foundation. And now he seemed to be smearing the whole with a sort of dirty paint that looked like a cross between moss color and mole. He had removed the door to replace it with one that was made in two parts, had taken out the up-to-date electric bell to place a brass knocker to serve the purpose. He had set in seven window lights above the door that would only need a lot of washing and extra work. Altogether, in the eyes of his neighbors, this new owner had destroyed the beauty of the little house on the corner.

In his own estimation, Bob Herbert was creating a work of art. And, in the opinion of the friends who spent week-ends with him in his unfinished abode he was accomplishing something genuinely artistic. "Herbert's Antique," they called the wee house with its fast aging look.

"Out comes that grand cement walk next week," announced Bob as he stood in the doorway framed in pink hollyhock. "Some one might have saved himself a lot of time and money if he had looked ahead—for out it comes. I'm going to have a flagstone walk all overgrown with grass and portulaca to match these lovely hollyhocks. How they ever came to be here I'll never know. They seem to have been born here—for they are so much a part of my scheme."

Bob's vacation was beginning and he arose bright and early on Monday morning to get done with the distasteful task of taking up the cement slabs to clear the way for his flagstones.

It was well into the week when he found his walk nearly finished so far as the laying of the stones was concerned. He surveyed it, whistling, and lighting his pipe in the falling daylight. It was only darkness that forced him to abandon his work.

Tired, he sat down on the pile of unused stones and puffed away at his pipe, his legs crossed, his mind's eye visualizing the walk when it would be overgrown with grass and look as if it had always been there.

A high, thick privet hedge separated his garden from the grounds next door. He heard voices on the other side. They came nearer. Two women discussed flowers and were examining, apparently, some lily-of-the-valley plants that grew near the hedge. Bob smoked on, but his heart took an unfamiliar quickening. One of the voices was vaguely recognizable to him. And yet—it couldn't be hers. She was in Europe taking a summer course in art. She had said good-by to him almost coldly because he had suggested that he cared for her.

"I have nothing of the sort in mind," she had said. "My art is my life. I shall not let any man interfere with it."

"Oh—there is nothing I would love more," replied the voice that Bob was certain now, was Beth's own. "But I must get to work. The big strike in England that sent me back home post haste was not for nothing. My plans have not been upset by anything but Fate. It must be that I am to remain at home and work. It is lovely out here, Helen, and it is good of you to want me."

Beth asked about who owned the house and all the conventional questions, but the answers were so guarded that he did not hear them.

Then the voices drifted away, the lights were switched on in the house next door and Bob was alone with his newly aroused longings for the only girl he had ever loved.

He watched the house from his own darkened room and when he caught sight of the dear face of Beth as she reached up to lower the shade in her sleeping room, he decided that he must find some way to win her.

There was a song she had always asked him to sing—for he sang a bit. "Just You" was the title. Would she understand if he should play his ukulele under her window, as lovers did in story books, and sing to her?

He found the opening in the hedge and, with a scratch or two from rose thorns, he found his way to a spot beneath her room. He sang their song once and then listened. Softly, the window opened. She had heard. The moon was up. He stood in its rays.

"Bob," she whispered.

"Beth," he answered.

And then followed a whispered explanation and a promise of meeting in the morning.

"Herbert's Antique," became thereafter, to two young people, "Herbert's Paradise," and before another summer had rolled around Beth was helping to plant the seeds in the old-fashioned garden. Often as she worked, she hummed the minor melodies in "Just You."

OSBORNE

GIRLS' WASH-GOODS FROCKS; SHORT JACKET FOR MATRON

IT is the mood of the mode that the once-upon-a-time "simple" washable daytime frock be now styled to the point of distinction. One cannot slight in the making either school dress or house frock of cotton weave though it be, and expect to remain in the good graces of Dame Fashion nowadays.

The new washable materials themselves are a very challenge "to do and to dare," in their fashioning. There are, for example, the new charmeuse prints. It takes an expert to distincial appeal, some of them handsomely trimmed with sleek flat fur, preferably broadtail or calfskin, the latter spotted in black and white.

Exquisitely textured twills, lustrous suede-finished cloths, broadcloth with a satiny sheen and what is of decided interest this spring, heavy bengaline or faille silk, these are mediums favored for the matronly tailor. To this list for summer wear must be added, georgette, for the tailleur of sheer firm fabric gives promise of a gush them from the genuine jacquard silk—and they can be made up every whit as effectively. And how beautifully they do emerge from a tubbing, just like new: The "last word" in fashiondom are the very tiny allover prints.

Speaking of a better styling for wash goods, why need sweet Miss Sixteen or younger or older ever bemoan the lack of a silken frock when a gingham can be fashioned as adorably as is the one in this picture! Yes, this is really and truly just a "simple gingham," endorsed by the Fashion Art League of America as demonstrating the possibilities as to what can and should be accomplished in the styling of washable cotton weaves. The idea of trimming prints and gingham with organdie is very popular successful vogue. Even now it is being exploited throughout notable French style exhibits. These georgette suits are handsome in all-black.

An Easter-day ensemble-ideal for the matron is pictured in the foreground of this picture. Suede-finished cloth is the chosen medium for this handsome tailleur. Black-and-white spotted calfskin faces the coat revers. Not only is the suit itself 100 per cent perfect in its minutest detail, but from the crown of madam's head to the tip of her toes not a proper accessory is missing.

Dignity and good style are bespoken in the tall-crowned fine black felt chapeau which tops this costume. The tiny white-wing trimming carries out the black-and-white theme in harmony with the black-and-white spots of the

this season. Just now pretty this may be done is told in this picture. The forearm puff on the sleeve of organdie is banded with the gingham and there is a deep cape collar of the organdie dropping from the neckline at the back.

It is already apparent that much interest will be forthcoming in fine wash goods this spring and summer. A favored material is flowered dimity. Exquisitely sheer printed voiles also promise a tremendous vogue.

All-black or black with white and strictly tailored, briefly yet definitely describes a smart matron mode, as Paris sees it for early spring. The new short-jacket types carry special appeal, some of them handsomely trimmed with sleek flat fur, preferably broadtail or calfskin, the latter spotted in black and white.

Very good style, too, for the matron is a short-jacket suit of gray or beige covert cloth, fashioned after the model shown to the left in the picture.

OCEAN BEACH is famous as San Diego's greatest residential seaside community and is situated only six miles from the metropolitan district, with which it is connected by fast electric railway service and the paved coast highway. It is the most thriving and populous section of the peerless Point Loma peninsula, with ideal climate, wonderful productive soil and scenery unsurpassed. Wide avenues lead from the heights to the seashore and nearly all streets are paved and sidewalked, with a complete paving program in progress from the bay frontage to beautiful Sunset Cliffs. Ornamental lights adorn the main business section, while modern commercial structures and fine new homes, cottages and bungalow courts are constantly in course of construction. This delightful suburb has exceptionally good schools, churches, civic clubs, mail carrier service and all that makes life really worthwhile as is well attested by the appended list of prominent and progressive business interests:

NEW CALIFORNIA THEATRE

Fun right off the bat. That's
"Casey at the Bat", with Wallace
Beery in his new role at the New California theatre for one week starting today.

The time is twenty-five years ago;
the place, Centerville; the characters,
O'Donnell and Casey, junk dealers.
In addition to being a junior member of the firm, Casey emerges as Cen-terville's hardest hitter, and the heaviest suitor of Camille, played by Zasu
Pitts the village modiste.

Sterling Holloway is the town barber. The tale is simple. Both junkman and barber love the same snappy girl. Sterling discovers Beery to be another Babe Ruth and the small town becomes one of New York's most famous figures. There's an amusing hansom cab adventure and a screaming trip in an auto, vintage of 1900.

Fanchon and Marco have created another gorgeous "Idea", of Oriental splendor, with Honorable Wu, famous Chinese musical comedy star the feature artist. Silks and colorful textiles, magnificently embroidered, are used in the costumes and drapes for the stage production. Chinese music, Oriental dances and the Chinese version of American entertainment are delightfully combined by Honorable Wu and his big company of Chinese players.

Al Lyons and his Band furnish the musical atmosphere for the presentation and also a symphonic group of semi-classical numbers which have been so popular in the past.

Pictorial Newsreel and other short screen subjects balance the excellent entertainment for San Diego's newest playhouse, the New California theatre.

BALBOA THEATRE

Just the thought of Harry Langdon is good for a laugh. To picture him in the adolescent age, with his first long pants, is a scream for the patrons of the Balboa theatre where "Long Pants," is appearing the last times tomorrow.

Beginning in San Francisco just before to earthquake and fire, the story touches briefly upon the birth of the hero. He is then shown at eight and later at seventeen. As the title indicates, the plot revolves around the boy's first pair of long pants.

Starting Sunday, for three days, Adolphe Menjou will be seen in "Sorrows of Satan," one of Marie Corelli's

OCEAN BEACH BOY SCOUTS

Boy Scout Troop No. 29 of Ocean Beach, held a most interesting meeting Friday night last. Jean Baxter and Rob Elliott were elected as members of the troop. The patrol leaders, Jack McClellan, John Pullman and Walter Dunn are preparing their patrols for the Annual Inspection on May 20. Scout Commissioner Van Dusen will inspect the troop. At the close of the business meeting the scouts conducted a number of tests and games, after which they enjoyed refreshments of cake and chocolate.

The Point Loma High School base-

Coach Joe Caldwell, himself a for-defeated the La Jolla nine in the first league game of the season. Af-resulted in a defeat for the Point

SCHOOL DAYS

Mother's Cook Book

Labor is wholesome for all. Joy by it is sustained, and it diverts the greatest sorrow. It means that the good God made it for each of us.

THE FAMILY MEAL

ALL rich cakes, puddings, pies and preserves should be eaten sparingly after the age of sixty. All green vegetables, such as spinach, peas, lettuce and cress, should find a place in one meal each day. These are especially valuable for growing children and equally valuable for the aged.

Orange Sauce.

Mix one cupful of sugar, rind of one orange and two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch; when well blended add two cupfuls of boiling water and cook until thick and the cornstarch taste is removed; then add a tablespoonful of butter, one-third of a cupful of orange juice and a pinch of salt. Serve hot over plum or cottage pudding.

Fruit Sandwiches.

Finely chop well-washed figs, add a small quantity of water and cook in a double boiler until a paste is formed. Sweeten to taste and flavor with grated lemon peel; cool and spread on slices of buttered raisin or nut bread. Press together in pairs and cut into four small triangles. Garnish each with a large seeded raisin.

Prune and Nut Sandwiches.

Remove the stones and finely chop one cupful of prunes, add one-half cupful of chopped English walnuts, moisten with mayonnaise dressing and use as a filling between thin slices of buttered bread. Cut into any desired shapes and serve with coffee.

Chicken Pie With Oysters.

Cut into pieces a nice fat chicken, put into a saucepan, cover with boiling water, season highly with salt and pepper and stew until it is tender. Line the sides of a baking dish with a nice rich crust. Remove the largest bones from the chicken and place the meat in layers with oysters, salt and pepper and pieces of butter. Pour a half the chicken broth and some of the oyster liquor. Cover with a top crust and bake.

Benares Salad.

Take one cupful of grated fresh coconut, one pint of cubed apple, one cupful of finely cut celery, one small onion cut into fine cubes; mix all well and moisten lightly with the milk of the coconut, let stand until well chilled, add a light seasoning of French dressing, and when ready to serve add plenty of mayonnaise.

THE NOISY HOUSE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

ALTHOUGH perhaps we now may scold her, We would not have her one day older, We would not have her one day wiser, For love is, after all, a miser, And would that we might keep her always Still fondly romping through the hall ways, Still filling all the house with clatters When we have such important matters, Still wearing shoes and tearing dresses And overwhelming with caresses— Although we try to rearrange her, We really would not want to change her.

For once there was no noisy laughter; There came a time, and long, long after, We went on tip-toe, lest we wake her, For fear some passing breeze might take her

Out of our house and our embraces, Yes, you will find upon our faces The record of those days of praying, Those nights of watching—when her playing Had ceased, and left the awful stillness

That hangs about a house of illness, God grant, although she now may riot, That not again our house is quiet. (© by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At 21: Aaron Sapiro, Messiah of the Famous, Was a Theological Student.

"AT TWENTY-ONE I was a student at the Hebrew Union college in Cincinnati. I stayed eight years at the theological school, but I left before my course was finished because I believed strongly that any church must be an instrument of special science, to further human welfare, rather than an instrument for the preaching of a fixed and changeless creed. I told them so and I told them I could not go on.

"During the last half of this period I paid my way by tutoring at the University of Cincinnati, where I also held the salaried position of student assistant in history.—Aaron Sapiro."

TODAY—Mr. Sapiro is the idol among coast farm and fruit growers, and the inspired leader for hundreds of thousands of farmers in other parts of the country. He is the acknowledged authority and organizer of the co-operative movement for growers and by his great genius has saved farmers millions of dollars yearly. Entirely under his leadership and legal counsel there have been organized co-operative associations in this country and Canada having a total membership of over half a million farmers and fruit growers.

Mr. Sapiro is a wonderful example of what talent and determination can accomplish in America. He started life in an orphan asylum.

Do You Know That:??

"CROCODILE Tears" is an allusion to the old superstition that the crocodile sheds tears and moans and sighs like a person in distress. And it is a fact that the crocodiles do emit loud and plaintive noises quite like the mournful howling of dogs. Hearing these noises credulous travelers naturally associated tears with these cries.

And so the phrase "crocodile tears" has come to mean tears of sham or hypocritical sorrow.—Anna S. Turnquist.

THE WORLD'S GREAT EVENTS

Napoleon Bonaparte (Part III)

FOR years Europe crouched cowering and helpless at Napoleon's feet. The British bulldog snarled unconquered defiance and the Man of Destiny was wise enough to leave Great Britain alone. So England continued to stand as the one obstacle between the Corsican and the rule of the whole world. Yet Europe, though cowed, waited patiently for a chance to avenge itself of its tyrant. And that chance came in 1812.

Russia broke certain clauses in her treaty with France, and in May, 1812, Napoleon declared war on her. With 700,000 men he began his invasion. Barely 300,000 Russians opposed the advancing French hosts, but their tactics were unexpected. Avoiding a general engagement wherever possible, the Russians continually fell back before Napoleon's advance, wasting the country they passed through so that the pursuing French found neither provisions nor fuel.

Now and then—at Borodino and elsewhere—the French caught up with their fleeing enemies and won decisive victories, though at great cost. Following out tactics similar to those he had used successfully against Prussia and Austria, Napoleon struck straight at Russia's heart by marching on Moscow. He arrived there on September 15, to find the city deserted and in flames. The patriotic Russians had sacrificed home, property and wealth in order to block the advance and mar the conquest of their hated foe. Napoleon could pursue the retreating patriots no further over a desolate territory. His mighty army of 700,000 had dwindled to 120,000. So he ordered a retreat.

The merciless northern winter was setting in. The country was stripped of provisions. Bands of mounted Cossacks harassed the diseased, starving, half-frozen soldiers. Of all the vast army of invasion barely 25,000 reached France alive. Napoleon had, long before this, left his army, hurried to Paris and ordered a conscription of recruits to press the war. But his luck was gone. The "chance" for which ten beaten nations had waited so long had at last come. The climber had stumbled. The invincible general had been beaten. France's unbroken triumph had been turned into defeat. All Europe was roused. The Russian disaster had proven that Napoleon was only mortal. His name lost its terror.

An alliance was formed by Russia, England, Prussia, Sweden and Spain, and in 1813 they massed an army near the Elbe. Napoleon had 250,000 soldiers in Germany. For months he beat the allies in battle after battle, and at last forced them to a truce. They took advantage of this armistice to persuade Austria to join their league. Then at the truce's end, the united armies concentrated at Dresden. There he again routed them. But Napoleon's army was so weakened by the campaign that he was forced to fall back on Leipzig, where the allies hemmed him in. And there, in October, 1813, "the Battle of the Nations" was fought. Napoleon was beaten. Refusing to see that his star had set, he returned to Paris and ordered 300,000 recruits raised.

The allies entered France, and there a second campaign—this time on French soil—was waged. From January to March, 1814, Napoleon once more beat the invaders at every point. But Wellington, with an English army, was advancing on Paris from the south, and force of numbers proved too much for the Corsican.

The veterans who had won him so many victories were dead. Their places were taken by raw recruits. His best generals, too, were gone. The men to whom his name had been a slogan of success were replaced by a generation weary of war. On March 30 Paris was captured by the allies, and the populace hailed the invading armies as deliverers. Talleyrand, Fouché and other diplomats made great by Napoleon, deserted him and went over to the enemy.

France was worn out. For 17 years Napoleon had paralyzed trade and home life by dragging off to war the young men of the nation. Taxes had been heavy. Coming as it did on top of the horrors of the revolution, Napoleon's rule had nearly wrecked the country. For over a decade he had turned all Europe into an armed camp; had changed pastures into battle fields; had sacked and devastated populous districts, and slain hundreds of thousands of men who should have been helping their country's progress. With iron hand he had swayed the destinies of the continent; changed its map and crushed patriotism and national independence everywhere save in France. Europe loathed him. France was tired of him and tired of fighting.

The emperor had sense enough to see this, and abdicated in favor of his son. This compromise the allies would not accept. They packed their former conqueror off to exile on the island of Elba and installed Louis XVIII (younger brother of the beheaded Louis XVI) on the French throne. Then Europe rested from its long era of terror and bloodshed.

But the respite was brief. The most dramatic events in the Corsican's career were still to be enacted.

Easter, 1927

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS year on April 17 the whole Christian world will be celebrating Easter Sunday as the Festival of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. Because Easter means so many different things to many different people, it is worth while for us to take stock of our knowledge of the history of this annual festival, and after doing that we may, perhaps, have a clearer idea of what it should mean to us.

Nearly everybody knows that the date of Easter varies from year to year, that unlike Christmas it does not come on one certain day of the month in one certain month, that unlike Thanksgiving day it does not come on a certain day of the week in a certain month and that it may come on a certain day—Sunday—in either of two months. That is to say, Easter Sunday may fall either in March or April. But they do not know, perhaps, that it cannot come earlier than March 22 nor later than April 25 nor the reasons therefor.

To arrive at those reasons it is necessary to go back into ancient history. The festival now known as Easter was celebrated by ancient Israel as the Passover for many centuries before the birth of Jesus Christ. It was based upon the events which took place when the Hebrews were saved from the destruction which was visited upon the Egyptians, as given in Exodus 12:27. The first Christians, being in the main Jews, continued for a long time to observe the Passover as well as other ancient ceremonies. But gradually these early followers of the Cross began to substitute the Christ for the paschal lamb of Israel in the Passover ceremonies.

Eventually there arose a difference of opinion between the Christians of Hebrew descent and those of Gentile descent as to the time when these ceremonies should be celebrated. Those of Hebrew descent declared that the day of the death of Jesus should be the date of the ending of the paschal fast, which in Hebrew rites, always was on the fourteenth day of the month in the evening. Therefore the Easter festival, which followed, might fall on any day of the week. Those of Gentile descent, however, wanted the first day of the week, Sunday, to be the first day of the resurrection festival. Thus the Friday preceding would be observed as the date of the crucifixion without paying any attention to the day of the month, the fast continuing until midnight of Saturday.

The dispute over this point was complicated by the irregularities of the time of full moon in relation to the year. The Hebrew sacred year began at the instant of the vernal equinox, but this time is subject to slight changes due to the astronomical fact of perturbations of the motion of all bodies in the solar system. The Hebrews based their years on lunar changes, whereas we now determine the exact length of a year by the sun and stars, which is more accurate. It is notable that the ancient Hebrews always had trouble with their chronology because they based the beginning of each month on the first sight of the new moon.

The trouble was principally due to the fact that the moon revolves around the earth in 27 days, 7 hours, 43 minutes and 11½ seconds, and the earth around the sun in 31,558,149 seconds. Therefore the moon makes 13.3687 revolutions to the earth's year. Full-moon times are also out of harmony with the spring equinox, and this fact caused trouble in determining time in ancient times. The result of all these complications was that by applying the Jewish rules to Easter, the dates of the crucifixion and the resurrection, two days which were supposed to be fixed for all time, varied constantly.

For 325 years the difficulty between the Christians of Jewish descent and those of Gentile descent continued. Not being able to decide the recurrence of Easter, the council of the early Christian church finally appealed to the astronomers in Alexandria, Egypt, for aid. However, these scientists were not of much assistance, for they had no lunar tables such as we now have, computed by master mathematicians. They attempted to make rules, but the variations of the full moon in reference to the year would not cause Easter to fall on Sunday any more than any other day. All wanted it to come on Sunday, so each nation celebrated to suit itself so that it would come on that day. Thus in A. D. 387 the Gauls celebrated Easter on March 21, in Italy it fell on April 18, and in Egypt on April 25.

Eventually the selection of a certain Sunday was definitely fixed during the Sixth century A. D. It was designated as the Sunday between the fifteenth and twenty-first days of the moon in the first month of the Jewish lunar years. It was directed that the computation should be made according to the tables of Victorinus of Aquitaine, introduced in 457 A. D. Because of the fact that Britain had ceased to be a part of the Roman empire, the Sixth century decree did not affect the British church at first, and it continued to calculate Easter on a basis previously approved at Rome. The matter was finally disposed of at a synod held at Whitby in Yorkshire in 664 A. D., after which the clergy of the British Isles conformed to the general practice of the western church.

Accordingly Easter is now observed by both the Roman Catholic and Protestant churches on the first Sunday after the full moon (or fourteenth day of the moon) on or next after March 21. So it cannot be earlier than March 22 nor later than April 25. Thus it is possible for the astronomers and mathematicians to tell in advance on what dates Easter will come each year, and they are now known for more than a century in advance. This, of course, may be changed, especially if the proposed new calendar which is to contain 13 months is put into effect universally. In that case Easter Sunday will be a fixed date.

Just as Easter is a variable date, so it has a variable meaning to various persons. To the child, who cannot grasp its religious significance, it means a day whose symbols are rabbits, little chickens and Easter eggs. To the children of Washington, D. C., it means especially the day when they roll Easter eggs on the lawn of the White House while the President of the United States and the First Lady of the Land look on and enjoy the sight of a child's happiness. To Catholics it means the remarkable sunrise Easter service near Los Angeles, the fame of which has become world wide.

Far as some of these meanings may appear to be from the real significance of Easter itself, they are in reality not so far. Easter day is Resurrection day, the climax of the springlike urge when all nature awakes from sleep, throws off the death-like chill of winter and begins to live anew. The egg is the simplest and most easily understood symbol of potential life. Within its shell is concealed the germ which can be warmed into life. So it becomes what can be regarded as the primary symbol of the Easter season. When that germ is warmed into life and develops to a certain point, the baby chick emerges, and life, real life, begins. So these fluffy little balls of down, beloved of all the children, are also symbols of Easter.

With all nature bedecking herself in new raiment, why should not mankind also celebrate the surge of renewed life with new apparel? So the Easter hat and the frock in which midday appears at church on Easter morning is not mere human vanity. She puts them on because she must! She has heard the call of spring, the message that all life is renewed, and she attires herself to be in keeping with the season.

Easter has a deep religious significance in its celebration of the triumph of light over darkness, of love over hate, of right over wrong, of the true over the false, of all that is good over all that is bad—of all these as exemplified in the life and death and resurrection of Jesus Christ. But it has a deeper significance in that it exemplifies a fundamental truth of human existence. Man finds life good. He longs for everlasting life. He longs for some assurance that he will have it. And the spirit of Easter gives him that assurance—that though he dies he shall live again. So Easter is a symbol of that assurance. Christ died but lived again. Man may die, but so surely as he has faith he, too, shall live again. So he can lift up his altars of joy and hope and victory: Christ is risen! Christ is risen! No victory bath the grave!

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

CITY ADVENTURES

Now whenever Dorothy or Douglas had gone shopping they had always walked into the shop through a door which was on the street. Sometimes they had gone upstairs in the shop—but they had always gone into it in the regular way they had thought.

But this time Uncle John was taking them shopping below the level of the street. For the shops were in the Hudson Terminal building and the street was above them!

How strange it did seem. They had a little money to spend and they decided how much to spend on candy, and how much to save for a soda.

They were picking out their candy as they saw people rushing in, giving orders for all sorts of things under the sun that could be bought and then hurrying out, saying:

"We'll be back for our bundles to-night."

"Can't they stop to get them now?" Dorothy asked.

"They haven't time, I suppose," said Douglas. "I really don't wonder they haven't time. There is so much to see in the Wonder City that sometimes I feel like rushing just that way myself."

"But then we wouldn't see the wonders," said Dorothy. Before Dorothy had finished speaking several people had shrieked, and someone had grabbed them, pulling them back. What had happened? They couldn't imagine!

And everyone seemed so frightened! Just then into the underground store came a horse with a wild bount and rush. For a rather warm mid-winter day had come and the doors had been swung wide open. The people hurried, scurried back of the counter. A runaway horse in the shops below the street level!

Fishes of All Sorts and Sizes.

How could he have managed it? At last someone caught the horse, no one was hurt and the people were quiet again.

"That doesn't seem so queer to me," said Dorothy. "He probably wanted to give an order for buy and then rush out, saying he would be back again in the evening to get it before he left for New Jersey."

"Well," laughed Douglas, "that is quite an idea of yours, but I believe buy is about the only thing they don't sell in these shops. However, I don't think it's queer that the horse wanted to see what was down here."

"Yes," agreed Dorothy, "we've learned in our reader that the horse is the most intelligent animal and I suppose he wanted to see a wonder, too!"

And, while Uncle John laughed, too, and joined in their talk, he felt his heart beating a little faster than usual, for he felt it had been a very narrow escape.

He hoped that none of the fishes would do anything wild, for the fishes were to be visited that day.

"Yes," he told Douglas and Dorothy, "at last we're really pay a visit at the Aquarium. It has been put off quite long enough."

So they all went down to the Aquarium which was at their beloved Battery and which looked out upon New York Harbor.

It was the large building they had passed so many times on their way to boats to take harbor trips.

Inside were tanks filled with water in which were fishes of all sorts and sizes.

"Do you see," said one of the keepers to Douglas, "that the fishes are giving a circus today? They haven't put up billboards as real circus people do, but they have been splashing enough for the past few days for anyone to tell that something wonderful was soon to happen and today they are ready."

Douglas and Dorothy went to the tank where there was a large mother seal.

She was the ringleader—just like the man in the tall black hat who stands in the center ring at the circus and cracks a big whip.

Instead of cracking a whip, mother seal was splashing.

"Splash, splash, splash, up you go, my beauties." The smaller seals in the next tank were on a board. As the mother seal gave her last signal to splash, off they dove into the tank, and when they swam up again the mother seal was splashing in a way which meant:

"A splendid trick, my children. You are the wonders of the age."

Writer Claims Vanity

Is Spoiling Language

Vanity is corrupting the French language, says Abel Bonnard, a writer of note.

It is vanity, he says, that leads people to prefer a new word, coined or from another language, to the old one they really know and understand.

"The public likes to be fooled," he remarks, agreeing with Mr. Barnum. He cites many words used currently to describe things long used and with names of their own, but which, for commercial purposes, like the hard-working rabbit skin in the fur business, have to be baptized anew to create that "desire to buy" in the customer.

This vanity to have the latest thing, even when only the name is new, Bonnard regards as one of the chief differences between the passing generation of conservative people and the "modernists." Many people who are "up to date," he observes, shy at expressing themselves clearly and need obscure words and phrases to portray the haziness of their own minds.

First Playhouse Located

According to a writer in the Pathfinder Magazine the first playhouse or theater in the United States was located in Williamsburg, Va. It was built in 1716 during the regime of the colonial governor, Alexander Spotswood. Charles Stager and his wife, Mary, essentially dancers, contracted with William Leighton for the theater. Some years before, in 1665, the court in Virginia acted as play censor also, having passed judgment on a performance of "Ye Bare and Ye Cub" to satisfy a complaint that the costumes were objectionable. The court found nothing objectionable, however.

Japan Develops Film Art

American motion pictures have always been popular in the Orient, and those about Indians, and the "Wild West" have been especially popular. Chaplin films also found a ready favor, but Japan is rapidly developing a film art of its own. The most popular film in Japan today is one called "Schoolmaster Matsumoto." It is an extremely simple story of the grammar grades; the climax being the rescue by the schoolmaster of one of his pupils who has fallen into the river. The film, though so simple in theme as to arouse wonder among American movie experts, ran for a full year continuously in Tokyo.

Case of Example

Charles, age five, watches closely his twelve-year-old brother Morris.

As it happens Morris is fond of books, and each night he replies to father's call to go to bed: "Aw, dad, wait a minute till I finish this chapter!"

One day Charles was entertaining himself by reading a book, already known by heart, when mother called: "Charles, come here, dear, and pick up your blocks; they're scattered all over the floor."

"All right, mother," he replied in a preoccupied manner. "Wait till I finish this chapter."

Ingenious Swindle

Infested with moles, the commune of Martignyburg, Switzerland, offered a bounty of ten sous for every creature destroyed. The tails were to be produced as proof. One man brought in a prodigious array of tails. Suspicion was aroused and a scientist was asked to investigate. Use of a magnifying glass disclosed a hoax on a large scale. The man would catch one mole, shave off its hair, cut a round shoe lace into short bits, soak them in glue, then roll them in the hair. Dozens of tails were produced in this way.

Dog Mothers Pigs

Mothered by a dog, four pigs are thriving on a farm at Kilmacrennan, Donegal, Ireland. A sow on the farm gave birth to a litter of 17 pigs. About the same time the dog had puppies. The farmer drowned the puppies, so the dog adopted the four pigs from the sow.

The man who spends his money like water is supposed to liquidate his debts.

Time of Hope and Joy

Easter is a time of joy and forgetfulness of the griefs that are past. "Why weepest thou?"—that is the watchword of the day, the symbol of the spirit of Easter. "For, lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth, the time of the singing of birds is come." The Easter spirit brings a resurrection of all hopes and on this day the tombs of grief, despair, faltering courage, questioning doubts and frustrated struggles are empty. There is a new birth, a new faith—He is risen, and with Him nature and humanity arise.

The world itself keeps Easter day

And Easter larks are singing.

And Easter flowers are blooming gay

And Easter buds are springing;

The Lord has risen as all things tell,

Good Christians, see ye rise as well!
